- Once cut or the cut option has been declined, the winner has the option for the emcee to deal the first 7 cards off the top OR every other card OR every third card. The options to cut and the choice on how to deal are to make the deck as random as possible.
- The first card is turned face up and the winner is instructed to guess whether the next card face down is higher or lower than the card just revealed. In this game, Aces have the highest value followed by Kings, Queens, Jacks and then all numerical cards in order from 10 down to 2.
- If the guess is correct (and for each successful guess which follows up through the seventh and final card), the winner has the option to "freeze" and keep the amount of FSP shown on the board above the card just revealed or discard that amount and try to guess the next high/low card for a bigger prize.
- Any incorrect guess results in the winner receiving the base prize of $100 FSP.
- In the event the newly revealed card ties the value of the previous card, a replacement card off the top of the deck is placed face down over the newly revealed card and the winner guesses again. The winner may change their prior guess.
