Alternates are not announced unless if needed. There are no duplicate winners.

How To Play "Mini" Deal Or No Deal and Prizes Awarded:

- Each of the 10 winners selected to play "Mini" Deal Or No Deal has their own game to play on our PowerPoint Theatre Screen.
- There is a hidden FSP prize value behind each electronic case (case/s) numbered 1 through 10. Prize values in random order include: $50, $75, $100, $125, $150, $200, $250, $300, $400 and $500. All prize values are also displayed openly in a list on the screen so everyone can see what values are available.

- The game begins with the winner selecting one case to “hold” but not open. The winner is given a tile with the number of their held case.
- Of the remaining nine cases, the winner selects five to open. Each case is opened one at a time to reveal its value. That value is then removed from the list so everyone can see what values remain available.
- Once all five cases are opened, the show’s banker makes the winner an FSP offer based on all unopened values. The offer appears on the screen.
- The winner has the option to accept the banker’s FSP “deal” as their winnings OR reject the offer and open the held case. If the held case is opened, the winner receives the FSP value inside which could be any unopened value.
- “For fun,” RSC will reveal the values in each unopened case.

How To Play “Full” Deal Or No Deal and Prizes Awarded:

- The winner selected to play “Full” Deal Or No Deal has their own game to play with 21 closed metal cases (similar to those from the actual game show).
- There is a hidden FSP prize value within each case numbered 1 through 21. All prize values are also displayed openly in a list on the screen so everyone can see what values are available.
- The game begins with the winner selecting one case to “hold” but not open. The held case is pulled from the table and kept on a podium near the winner.
- The “round” portion of the game begins. For each round...
  - The winner opens a set number of cases if he or she elects to participate in that round:
    - Round 1: Open 5 cases, leaving 16 unopened including the held case.
    - Round 2: Open 5 cases, leaving 11 unopened including the held case.
    - Round 3: Open 4 cases, leaving 7 unopened including the held case.
    - Round 4: Open 3 cases, leaving 4 unopened including the held case.
    - Round 5: Open 2 cases, leaving 2 unopened including the held case.
  - For each round, each case is opened one at a time to reveal its value. That value is then removed from the list so everyone can see what values remain available.
  - Once all cases are opened at the end of a round, the show’s banker makes the winner an FSP offer based on all unopened values. The offer appears on the screen.
  - The winner has the option to accept the banker’s FSP “deal” as their winnings OR reject the offer and open the number of cases required to complete the next round.
  - If the winner completes Round 5, there are two unopened cases left. The winner has the option to accept the banker’s final FSP “deal” as their winnings OR reject the offer. If the deal is rejected, then the winner must choose to open EITHER their held case OR the remaining unopened case on the table. If either held case is opened, the winner receives the FSP value inside which could be any unopened value.
